Alex-

You are correct, we did discuss this during the permitting of this well and Encana agreed to the COAs on the Form 2A to comply with the RSAP. We also discussed asking for a waiver in a Sundry Notice using the process you outlined.

Unfortunately Encana's internal communication on this was not synchronized between our Regulatory group and our Environmental group, who submitted this Sundry. Encana will resubmit the Sundry Notice addressing your comments.

I appreciate your understanding on this issue and commit to improving our internal communication to alleviate this type of mistake in the future.

Daniel-Encana MUST comply with Revision 3 of the Rulison Sampling and Analysis Plan (RSAP). If there are deviations from the RSAP, then those deviations must be addressed with all of the stake holders involved in Project Rulison. If Encana is following the RSAP and they feel they have met the RSAP requirements, then Encana must formerly provide their request (via Sundry Form 4) with supporting documentation of such request. At that time, the Colorado Oil and Gas Conservation Commission (COGCC) will review the request.

Jason-You and I discussed this before.

Please be as detailed as possible regarding the Sundry Notice request. Include information regarding the justification of wells closer to the Tier I and II sectors. At a minimum include:

- Reason for request
- Operator
- API number
- well name
- Location ID
- Supporting analytical
- Letter/statement from Encana's expert (URS?) verifying that this information is correct
- Etc.

The attached Sundry is NOT approved.

Thanks
Alex
