Photos were taken on an iphone, but it was not discovered until an attempt to download them at the office that the photos did not save to the phone like normal for an unknown reason. Upon discovery of this, an immediate photo test was conducted with the same iphone and again photos were not saved to photo storage. The phone was re-booted and a subsequent photo test was conducted where the photo autosave was working again. It was determined a glitch in the photo app did not properly save the sampling photos in the field as expected.
